WhoWhatWhereWhenApogaea2010

This is a guide to events, art, and camps at Apogaea 2010. But remember that fun, events, and art will be occurring without a schedule or pre-planned location.

Apogaea is what you make of it—the entertainment is what you and your fellow participants create. Whatever your special talent might be, share it with us!

Check at the Info Booth or individual camps for events not listed in this guide, or listed with a “TBA” designation.

An asterisk by the event/camp/art piece means that Apogaea has granted funding towards the piece or performance.

ARUS PRISTINUS*

While preparing the area for Apogaea 2010, DPW workers came across a strange metal form buried in the dirt. Thinking it was old farm or mining equipment, they started to dig it up. Quickly it became apparent the object was not something as mundane as farm equipment, but was possibly the most exciting thing any of them had ever seen. Questions and theories began to fly. It was a weapon. No, a communications antenna. No, an altar. No, a power source. It had been buried for hundreds of years. Thousands? Millions?

But to escape from it, one need only open one's eyes. CAUTION: Potential risk for those with photosensitive epilepsy.

Out here, your cell phone won't get bars. Google Maps won't be much help. And no one on Twitter cares about the neat rock you just found. Fortunately, you can still use the Terraphone to make a collect call home to say hello to your mother. Be sure to tell her all about the birds and the bees, the scenic views, the mountains, and the trees.

WATER SCREEN*

Of the four elements, water is the most fun, bringing vibrancy, release, and joy to any creation. The water screen offers a projection surface for an image, film, video or laser.
