XANDR, the Xychedelic Arachnid Neural Dancing Robot	Step into the spider dome and jack into XANDR, the Xychedelic Arachnid Neural Dancing Robot. Strap on your spider sensor vision, and get your arachno-groove on as a telepresence dancing robot spider. The spider itself seems anatomically correct, except that it was spawned in the deepest depths of the uncanny valley; the unholy spawn of a disco ball mated to a malfunctioning stage light system. Capable of carrying and dispensing libations, the wireless robot spider is remarkably large, nimble, and "safe" (We'll bring spare legs for when someone accidentally steps on one of XANDR's 8 feet). Spider wranglers will also be on duty with the ability to override and shut down the robot. Anyone will be able to control the robot, with a livestream spider vision show projected on the spider dome. The spider will normally be set to stream only mode, unless the spider wrangler explicitly allows for recording. The spider also carries a sound system that allows the operator to play sound effects, music, or speak from the spider.	BY: Friends of Alexander Hudspeth
